Even if you don't need the program itself, the upgrade is a good time to upgrade anyway. Consider it an investment in yourself, and wider skillset. Adobe released the first version of its Bridge for iOS, a system that lets you sync photos between mobile devices, laptops, and desktops. The latest version of the program will allow you to share files between photos over the AirDrop network and sync them over the Internet either to a central storage or to a folder on your laptop where you can access them from other machines. You can also import data files from a central storage such as Dropbox.
